

What is an Oracle?

Oracles, as products we can commonly buy in book stores, metaphysical stores and suppliers, exist in box form as a series of cards, with an accompanying reading booklet to inform use.

Oracles are based on divinatory channeling and each card reflects that of a page in a book in which ideas as part of a larger sequence of information were transcribed.

Purpose and Name Alignments

Readings Cards generally have become a part of Product consciousness in general reading and person use for given purposes. For this reason, there are diverse intentions attributed by the creators and they belong to various categories for digest. Readers, being those whom use the cards, may know them according to the names: Oracle deck, Affirmation deck, Devotions, Energisers, Divination cards, Spiritual Guidance cards, Tarot, Lenormand, and even Education cards, Encouragers and Self Care cards. Not all have a readership that aligns there use with Divination. How the cards are ultimately used service the intentions of the person using them.

The Reader

Readers of Oracle decks may be a user of the cards for their personal self or for an intuitive reading for another person. The reader responds to the modality of visual art, written word and 'intuitive insight' to construct or translate the information of a spread or as an singular account reading.

Spreads, generally, reflect an allocated or curated design structure by the product designer and writer whom conceives of the overall design of the oracle as a set of cards. Each card has an inherent correspondence of energy. For example, a Narrative spread may communicate 'the past current, the present theme and future current' with a direct relationship to energy relationships of the receiver.

Energy Relationships

The diverse nature of reading cards gives value to our reflective human insight to Spirituality and Psychology.

I believe it is important to emphasize the above well, whilst also reiterating that the driving language reflects the reader.

Energy shown in Oracle cards includes specific Archetypes, key messages and ideas, spiritual guidance, totems, figures and auspicious symbols.

For example,
Cards support 'generative concepts'.
Cards support 'dialogue around supportive, mindful care'.
Cards suggest 'toward alignments'.
Cards are 'reflective-identifiers' : with relevancy, encompassing belief, and pivot consciousness.

As a matter of focused awareness, not all are believers in Spirit nor are those who believe in Spirit, believers in transactions such as Spiritual contact interface. At the subtle level, the readership of cards is generally understood by Psychic people and Mediums as 'users' of cards, that spirit impacts our life's movements on a subtle level. Recognition is given for how many people dive into Intuition and relevance in the absence of conscious-insight, and also those who by contrast relate to the modality of correspondence that occurs with stimulus, relation and ascribed meaning.

Key Areas

Oracles are fascinating visual stimulus for a wide range of processes, not restricted to spread layouts. It is important to recognize breadth orientation to product when assessing their value and how they function for users across spiritual people.

- Psychology, Self - care, Guidance, Intuition & the Psychic Appreciation
- Stimuli, Educational Archetypes, Devotion, Worship of Guides
- Faith-based Visuals, Energy setting, Divination, Manifestation.
